Sinclair Inn Museum Painted Room/Ghosts

A newly restored Painted Room and ten modern-day Ghosts are two of the highlights of the Sinclair Inn Museum. A National Historic Site and one of Canada's architectural and historic gems, portions date to 1710 or earlier, making it one of the oldest surviving wood-frame structures in Canada. One of the few dwellings from the French regime in Acadia (prior to 1713) in existence, it offers a unique opportunity to view original Acadian construction techniques.

The current building combines two older ones joined in 1781 by Fredrick Sinclair. It has operated under many names and owners, primarily as an inn and tavern. Site of the first Masonic Lodge meeting in Canada in 1738, the building has witnessed many important events.

See construction styles and techniques over 300 years, from clay walls of the original Acadians to wood paneling of the 1950s, a testament to the on-going legacy of Annapolis Royal. 902-532-7754, www.annapolisheritagesociety.com
